A Classic Party Experience — Reinvented in Tulsa

The Old Way

Murder mystery parties have always been a fun, social experience — friends stepping into character, uncovering secrets, solving a crime together. But traditionally, they come with a hidden cost: hours of preparation. Printing character packets. Organizing envelopes. Managing fake money. Coordinating every detail before guests even arrive.

The New Way

All That Mystery removes all of that. It is the modern, digital evolution of a beloved group experience — reimagined for the way people actually host parties today. Clean, seamless, and ready to play from the moment guests walk in the door.

A Tulsa-based business bringing a polished, technology-driven twist to a timeless social format.

THE EXPERIENCE

It's More Than a Game — It's an Experience

Characters Come Alive

When people arrive, they're not just guests — they're characters. The game immediately pulls everyone into a shared narrative, giving even the most reserved attendees a role and a reason to engage.

The Room Transforms

As the game unfolds, people begin interrogating each other, forming alliances, and fully stepping into their roles. The quietest person in the room is often the most engaged by the middle of the night.

Genuine Connection

It's immersive. It's social. And it brings people together in a way most party activities simply don't — creating stories and memories that guests talk about long after the evening ends.

Tyler Robinson

Web Developer & Creator of All That Mystery

Tulsa-based. Technologist. Murder mystery enthusiast.

Tyler didn't set out to build a product — he set out to solve a problem he'd experienced himself, over and over, as a player and an aspiring host.

Built by Someone Who Lived the Problem

All That Mystery was created by Tulsa-based web developer Tyler Robinson, who has been playing murder mystery games for years. After experiencing firsthand how much time and effort went into preparing traditional games — printing materials, organizing packets, and delaying the start of the event — he decided to build a better way.

The result is a fully digital system that delivers roles, background information, and gameplay materials through private links — ready before guests even arrive. Instead of spending party time managing paperwork, hosts can focus entirely on the experience itself.
